

Interview Questions

Dismissed

How one woman's intuition ended her addiction and exposed a government cover-up.

Your book is about how you used your intuition to end your addiction to VLT's and expose a government cover-up. In what ways did your intuition help you?

In your book there is a section called The Rat Theory and in it, there is a sketch of a glazed eyed rat chained to a VLT machine. Can you tell me about your Rat Theory and it's significance in ending your addiction?

In the chapter You Mean I'm Normal, you talk about how the government spent $100 million on new, faster gaming machines that would cause players to lose more money in a shorter period of time. You believe certain arms of the government are intentionally hiding the fact that gaming machines are excessively addicting and harmful. In what ways are they doing that?

In the chapter of your book called The Difference Between Real and Fake Money, you painstakingly piece together a mathematical formula that you believe the government uses to hide the percentage of profit they make off gaming machines. Can you tell me how you were able to decipher this formula and the significance of this information?

In the chapter The Showdown, you have an intense and heated meeting with government officials where you try to get them to answer your questions. It's obvious to the reader they were evasive and had something to hide. Were they always that difficult to work with and have they ever given you all the information you were looking for?

People may argue that the money from gaming machines is much needed revenue for social programs and public services. You argue that believing we need this money is similar to plantation owners in the southern states arguing they needed slave labour to run profitable plantations. Can you explain the correlation please?

What do you hope to accomplish by writing this book?